An exceptional event at the Centre Pompidou

The Centre Pompidou is closing the doors of its iconic building on the 22nd of September 2025 to launch a major five-year renovation. During this period, the Constellation program will be taking the Centre Pompidou beyond its Paris walls, throughout France and around the globe. During the effervescence of Art Basel Paris, a moment when the art world will converge upon the capital, the institution will exceptionally open its doors on the 24th and 25th of October for a twofold celebration, inviting the public to rediscover the emblematic site and paying tribute to independent label Because Music for its 20th anniversary.

Because Beaubourg is the biggest celebration ever organised at the Centre Pompidou, taking over the eight levels of the building for two days and two nights of immersive experiences, showcases, brand-new creative endeavors and encounters: a unique opportunity to honor the Centre Pompidou's history while looking towards the future, in collaboration with Because Music and their artists.

An encounter between two creative pioneers

Since it opened in 1977, the Centre Pompidou has established itself as a unique place open to all artistic disciplines, combining visual art, live performance, music and spoken word. Its audacious architecture and open-minded spirit have electrified the international art scene ever since.

MUSIC

Founded in 2005 by Emmanuel de Buretel, Because Music has become a central player on the independent music scene internationally, constantly exploring the field of audio innovation and the 360° model. Because Music supports new and eclectic artists who push the boundaries of genre and combine artistic excellence with international openness such as Major Lazer, Oklou, Parcels, Justice, Sébastien Tellier, Catherine Ringer and Shay.

Over the years, the Centre Pompidou and Because Music have crossed paths through memorable performances by artists such as Camille, Keziah Jones, Charlotte Gainsbourg, Busy P, Brandt Brauer Frick, Daft Punk, and Pascal Comelade. This shared history will now be celebrated in an unprecedented co-conceived event blending art, music and performances.

The building handed to creative voices

Because Beaubourg will transform each space of the Centre Pompidou into a playground for creativity. Artists will take over the walls, halls and galleries, for a vibrant and collective celebration. Over two days, the Centre Pompidou will come alive with intense artistic energy, offering a rich and varied program: concerts and clubbing, immersive art installations, a roller disco, performances, workshops for children, movie screenings and masterclasses.
